PILOT ACTION LAUNCHED!

🚀 Pilot Action Launched in Italy! MOOC and OLC Put to the Test

We are excited to announce that the pilot action of the Mind Inclusion project has officially been launched in Italy! After the initial meetings to introduce the activities, we are ready to dive into the testing experiences and engage new participants. Together with our partners in Spain and Romania, we will assess the tools we jointly developed during the first two years of the project. We are eager to hear participants' feedback and continue promoting inclusivity in the coming months by spreading the project's results as widely as possible!

MOOC and OLC: The First Test

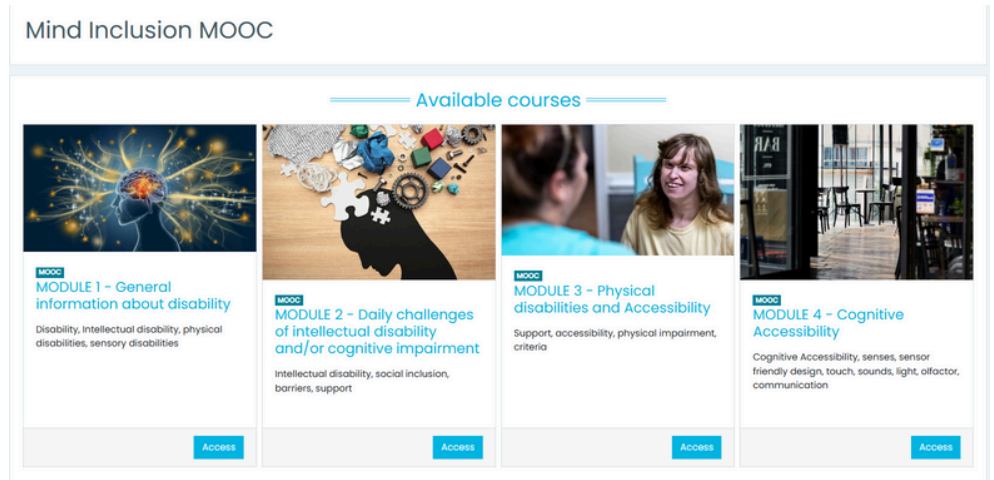

On January 29 and February 10, we organized two online meetings with managers of publicly accessible spaces to explore the MOOC platform and the project app together.

The Goal?

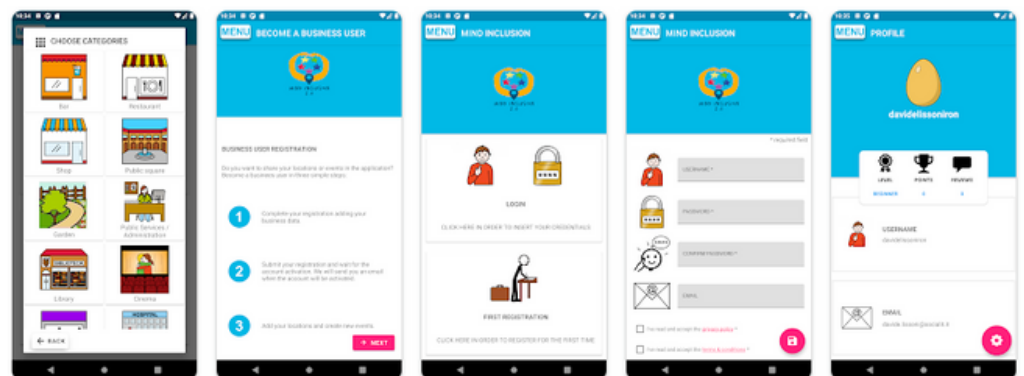

To inform new participants about the project, guide them through registration on the app and MOOC, and officially launch the pilot action in Italy.

During these meetings, we presented the platform's features and how these tools can support greater inclusivity in public spaces. Participants had the opportunity to register and start testing the resources independently.

Social professionals test the OLC and the app

Regarding the Online Learning Center (OLC), we organized two online meetings on February 5 and 12, bringing together social professionals. The goal, once again, was to introduce the project, the app, and the OLC, supporting participants with the help of the Cooperativa Margherita team. Overall, participants had the opportunity to test the tools in real-world settings, exploring their full potential.

Participants who wish to continue the journey, will be involved in additional meetings dedicated to evaluating the experience and collecting feedback to improve the project.

Next steps

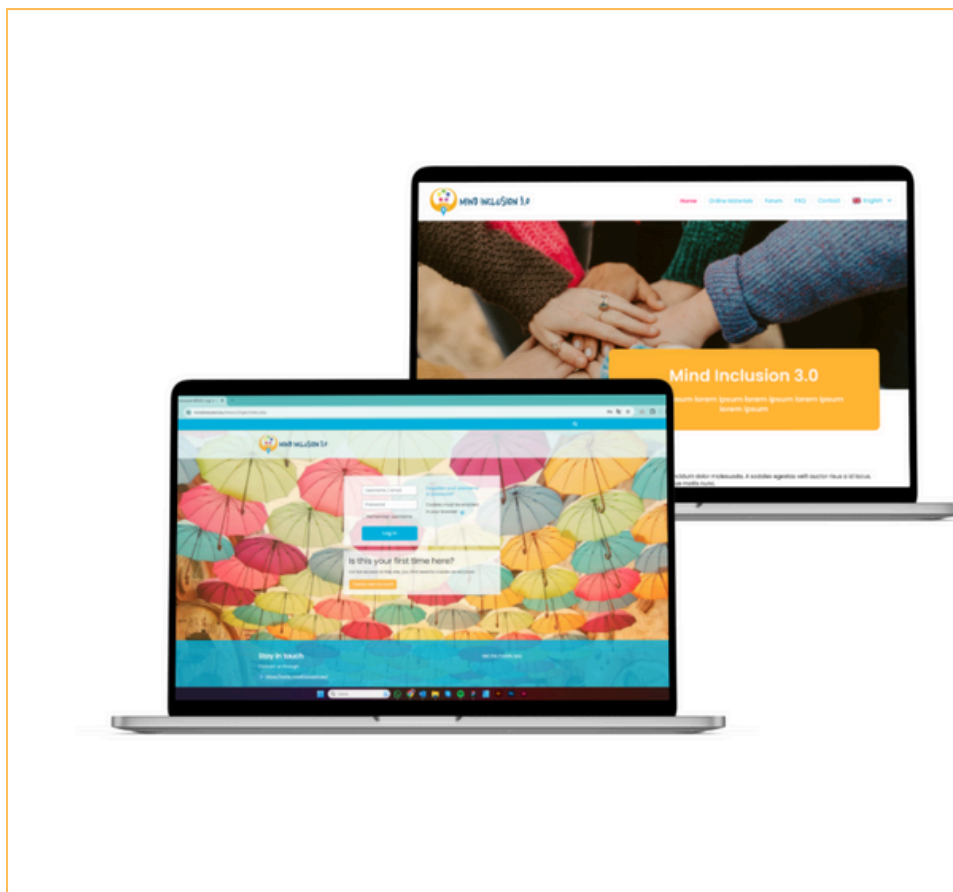

We will soon provide updates on the first results of the pilot actions!
